COUNCIL CALLS CONFERENCE ON
TRAFFIC PROBLEM*Will Discuss With West Penn
Hearings Relieving Crawford
Avenue Tieup.*SITUATION SERIOUS ONE

Every Car Purchased Only Adds to Difficulty of Providing Parking Space: Councilman Cypher Proposes Widespread of Meadow Lane.

More and more with every car purchased—parking in the streets is becoming a problem for Connellsville, as for every other municipality. Every time they meet members of City Council have their attention called to the situation one way or another. Monday night was no exception. West Crawford avenue came in for the major share of attention.

Here there is to be considered not only automobiles, but trolley cars. In order that some solution may be reached City Clerk O. C. Harmon was instructed to write officials of the West Penn Railway Company to meet with Council next Monday night to determine what shall be done relative to the trolley cars. Mayor Mitchell suggested also that merchants be invited to the meeting, so that all phases may be heard, for they were pointed as being intimately connected.

Complaints were made by Councilman J. L. Cypher of the number of trolley cars that often stand in the street at the West Penn station. A recent morning, he said, he counted five, while at the same time automobiles were lined up in a solid mass from Brinsford corner to the knuckle of the bridge. The congestion this time, he said, was the result of the company unloading shipments from the freight car to a truck. The truck and the freight car, he said, blocked the street.

Some time ago an agreement was reached between Council and the trolley company whereby the freight car was to be loaded and unloaded in South Arch street. This arrangement did not last long. Mr. Cypher insisted three or four days. That was during the term of the late Mayor Dugan's administration. Mayor Mitchell said he was through with trying to enforce the traffic ordinance. Having cars from the downtown streets, he said, brought down the wrath of the merchants and at the same time caused cries from the rural districts that the farmers were being made objects of discrimination. He said it will be necessary to "get together" before anything can be accomplished.

Councilman Wardley suggested temporary relief of the parking problem by making use of the vacant school lot by the Frances Cameron Building. This is under the control of the Board of Education, the mayor suggested. It is city property, nevertheless, Mr. Wardley felt. No action was taken toward securing it.

Connellsville made that local business and professional men make a practice of all-day parking in the downtown.

Before long, Councilman Cypher told Council, it will be necessary to widen Meadow lane from Peach street to relieve traffic congestion. He advocated making an early start. If, by no other means, borrow money to finance it was his advice. Even if Arch street is opened it will not solve the problem of relieving the congestion in Pittsburg street, he contended.

Seison, Brick Co.
Installs Dredger
At Volcano Plant

The Joseph Seison Fire Brick Company has equipped its Volcano plant with a dredging machine which operates on the principle of a steam shovel. This method of operating clay and shale mines, as compared with hand mining, reduces cost considerably on account of its being practically an automatic operation.

With the installation of this additional equipment, the manufacture of brick will become, so to say, a mechanical operation from the time the raw clay is loaded in cars, until the finished product leaves the dry press.

A number of radio fans in the city and vicinity heard President Coolidge deliver his tribute to former President Harding last evening. Four More Convicts
Make Getaway From Kansas State Prison

LANSING, Kan., Dec. 11.—Four convicts made a dramatic escape from the Kansas State Prison here last night—the second group to gain freedom within a week. One guard was wounded when he attempted to prevent the escape and a fifth prisoner was shot down as he climbed the prison walls.

Shortly after midnight Charles Kavanaugh, a convict with a long record, rang for Edward Stewart, the trusty in charge of the cells at night and told him there was a leak in the water pipe. As Stewart unlocked the cell door to investigate, John Stittler covered him with a revolver. The two prisoners took Stewart's key, locked him in the cell, held up Frank Henderson, a guard, and obtained additional keys, then locked Henderson with Stewart. After unlocking the cells of three other prisoners the five rushed to the walls.

BALDWIN WILL HOLD

LONDON, Dec. 11.—The British cabinet, it is understood, approved today the action of Premier Stanley Baldwin in deciding to retain office for the present. The cabinet adjourned at 1:30 P. M. after conferring with Baldwin at No. 10 Downing street.

It is believed Baldwin intends to remain until definitely defeated in Commons by a vote of Liberals and Laborites when it will be up to the opposition to produce his successor. Under the British political system if Baldwin resigns now, he would recommend his successor.

MEASLES DANGEROUS DISEASE, ONE TO BE SHUNNED, DOCTOR SAYS

HARRISBURG, Dec. 11.—Dangers arising from measles, one of the "dis-eases of childhood," which many mothers regard as inevitable for their youngsters, were explained today by Dr. Alfred Hand, professor of pediatrics of the University of Pennsylvania, cooperating with the State Department of Health. Dr. Hand said:

"Measles is such a common disease that many parents feel their children might just as well get it while young and so they take no precautions; and what is more serious, they feel that it is not a dangerous disease and are apt to neglect proper care of the children during the attack."

"The probable reason for this is that so few children die of ordinary measles in proportion to the number that have the disease; but the vital statistics of any large city will show that the number of deaths reported, as due to measles, is greater than from any one of a number of diseases which are much more dreaded by parents."

"The figures for the deaths from measles do not represent the whole danger of the disease, for many deaths attributed to pneumonia, middle-ear disease, possibly meningitis and even tuberculosis, might not have happened if measles had not been a forerunner."

Fifteen Charges Entered Before Alderman Fred Munk Against Murray.

SHAW FACES ONLY TWO

Did Not Participate in Actual Thievery
But Had Custody of Much of Load and Carried Gun, Officer Charges
Munk Property Is Identified

Given hearings before Alderman Fred Munk Monday night H. L. Shaw and W. H. Smith, alias Bill Murray, the two men arrested by the Baltimore & Ohio railroad police in a cave near South Connellsville last week for participation in a number of recent robberies, were held for court. Shaw was held under $1,000 bail on two counts, carrying concealed weapons and receiving stolen goods. Smith was held on 15 charges, 13 of which were for breaking and entering and committing larceny, one for carrying concealed weapons and another for having burglary tools in his possession. Bail for him was set at $15,000 in default of which he will be held at the county jail.

Information against the men were made by R. C. Bledsoe, captain of the railroad police.

Two hours were required to identify the stolen goods recovered in the hills about the cave. Not much of the loot was in the cave itself.

A. Butano, proprietor of the Army and Navy Store, Apple street, said that his loss was about $100. He identified approximately $150 to $175 in addition to what stuff had been recovered.

Fred L. Buttermore of the Connellsville Machine & Car Supply Company said the loss from the robbery of that place was yet about $300. A number of articles were recovered.

Homer Graft, manager of the J. I. Dick's hardware store at Scottdale, testified to a robbery there on November 14 with a loss of approximately $300. He identified considerable of the loot as taken from his place.

James B. Coughenour of the Goodwin Company told of the burglarizing of his place. He also recovered several stolen articles but there are still some missing.

Thomas H. Cunningham, whose blacksmith shop was robbed on November 23, estimated his loss at $150. Tools used in burglary work were stolen from his place.

Joseph Foley of South Connellsville identified his railroad, taken from a South Connellsville pool room on October 15.

C. E. Harvey, proprietor of a Dunbar pool room which was robbed on November 22, estimated his loss at about $100. He selected a number of articles from the table of loot as his.

J. J. Kerwin, also of Dunbar, whose store was robbed on November 16, also placed his loss at $100. At that time $50 in cash was removed. He identified a Canadian quarter as his.

J. E. Doll of the Washburn Tailoring Company on the West Side whose place was robbed the night before Smith's capture, while the officers were waiting for him to return to his shack, said he had recovered practically all of his goods.

Ralph Dandellio, whose shoe repair shop at South Connellsville was robbed November 2, said he was out $50 on the work. Some repairing supplies were taken, together with an alarm clock found in the shack.

The police captain testified that the Baltimore & Ohio station at Dunbar was robbed, 15 cents being taken from the cash register, and John De-Temple, Pennsylvania railroad detective, said the station of his company at Dunbar was also broken into but nothing was taken.

Murray was handcuffed to the chain in which he sat, took little notice of the proceedings about him. His head, with the wound inflicted when struck as he attempted to draw his gun on the police captain, was swathed in bandages. Most of the time he closed his eyes. Asked by the alderman to plead to the charges he would not respond. He never uttered a word after leaving the police station.

Shaw, the other prisoner, was in a cheerful humor and no cuffs were placed on him. He pleaded guilty to the charges placed against him. He is expected to be a valuable witness in the coming trial.

He says he believes there is still considerable loot hidden in the mountains. He told of his trip here with Smith being made on freight trains.

John Bull Ahead

A Frenchman now in this country tells of the discovery in Paris of the most "nervy" of all tourists, an Englishman, who entered a well-known cafe, accompanied by two little girls, ordered a bottle of mineral water and three plates, and began to eat sandwiches, which he had brought with him in his pocket.

The manager, overcome by this outrage, approached the Briton, and said: "I should like to inform you that this is not a cafe."

"Who are you?" interrupted the Englishman.

"I am the manager."

"Oh, you are the manager, are you? That is good. I was just going to send for you. Why isn't the band playing?"—Harpers Magazine.

Famous Old Recipe for Cough Syrup

Really and cheaply made at home, but it beats almost all for cough results.

Thousands of housewives have found that they can save two-thirds of the money usually spent for cough preparations, by using the well-known old recipe for making cough syrup at home. It is simple and cheap but it has no equal for prompt results. It takes right hold of a cough and gives immediate relief, usually stopping an ordinary cough in 24 hours or less.

Take 2 1/2 ounces of Pinex from any drugstore, pour it into a pint bottle and add plain granulated sugar syrup to make a full pint. If you prefer, use clarified honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, it tastes good, keeps perfectly, and lasts a family a long time.

It's truly astonishing how quickly it penetrates through every air passage of the throat and lungs—loosens and raises the phlegm, soothes and heals the membranes, and gradually but surely the annoying throat tickle and the cough disappear peacefully. Nothing better for bronchitis, spasmodic croup, hoarseness or bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, known the world over for its healing effect on the membranes. Avoid disappointment by asking your druggist for "2 1/2 ounces of Pinex with full directions and don't accept anything less. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. DICE USED BY THE ANCIENTS

Picture on Pottery of Men Playing With Cubes in New Mexico Valley.

How a vanished race which once lived in the isolated Rio Mimbres valley of Southern New Mexico "shot craps" has been revealed by prehistoric pottery dug up near Deming. In a scientific report just issued by the Smithsonian Institution Dr. J. Walker Fawcett of the bureau of American ethnology describes crockery showing scenes of and figures from the daily life of a people whose very existence was doubted until a few years ago.

On the bottom of a broken jar there is a gambling scene representing three men playing a game with dice, the spots on which can be plainly seen.

This artistic work was accomplished in an isolated valley where rivers have no outlet to the sea. It lies midway between the Pueblo and Mexican region, and shows affinities with the culture of both.—Detroit News.

PARROT'S CALLS SAVE LIFE

Repeats Woman's Cry for Help in Waters of Lake.

The parrot at the home of Leslie Muller, on the shore of Island Lake near Shelton, Wash., is deserving of a hero medal, the Muller family believes.

Mrs. Bullock, housekeeper for the Mullers, fell into the lake while fishing. Her cries for help were heard by the parrot working in the barn, but the parrot exactly repeated the calls with such effect that the men responded and swam to the woman just in time to save her life.

Ancient Mode of Torture. Breaking on the wheel was a horrible mode of putting to death by torture formerly in use in Europe. The condemned criminal was first fastened to two pieces of wood in the form of a St. Andrew's cross, with his legs and arms extended, and had the bones of his shins and thighs and the fore and upper arms broken with blows with a bar of iron. After that he was attached to a small carriage wheel, balanced on a stake, and allowed to suffer in this position till the breaking of his limbs. Later the punishment was so far mitigated that the criminal was put to death by a final blow on the breast, spine or neck before being exposed on the wheel, and sometimes he was strangled before even the breaking of his limbs took place. The torture was last used in Prussia about 1811.

377 Whales Caught. A catch of 377 whales in four months by three whaling stations is the record made by British Columbia coast whalers this year after a period of inactivity following upon the close of the war.

At the Theatres

The Paramount

"MEN IN THE RAW"—Presenting Jack Hoxie in an interesting role, in the feature picture today at this theatre.

It is a story of laughs, interspersed with gasps. It jumps from breathtaking feats such as bulldozing a wild steer or a sensational leap over a cliff, to the daring feat of throwing a live steer into space. For every shiver, there's a snicker; and the charming love story that threads its way through the plot is a pleasing relief.

The story is an adaptation of W. Bert Foster's well-known magazine tale, and George Elvery, who adapted it, makes an excellent offering out of the swift-moving story which is a remarkably acceptable vehicle for Hoxie.

The cowboy star stages a thrilling battle, under water, with the villain, following a chase across a river and an encounter in midstream. His rescuer Marguerite Clayton from peril by bulldozing a steer, and so remarkably did the camera catch this episode that every expression of both Hoxie and his heroine are registered during the daring feat, which apparently was performed by Hoxie personally and without the usual use of a "double," impossible in "closeups" such as are shown in the present play.

Wednesday and Thursday, Tom Moore will be seen in "Harbor Lights."

The Soisson

"TRILBY"—Showing today and tomorrow at this theatre, is a First National picture with Andree Lafayette and Creighton Hale in the stellar roles.

It was in Paris that Mr. Tully found his ideal for "Trilby" in the person of Andree Lafayette, a young French actress who is in every particular as the author described his heroine. Her portrayal has been classed as consummate art by critics; and the same have acclaimed Arthur Edmund Carewe's characterization of Svengali the acme of excellence. Carewe entered into the part fully cognizant that he had never before had such a splendid opportunity.

Creighton Hale seems to have been made for the role of "Little Billie," and the rounding out of the reality of friends with such artists as Philo McCullough, as "Toby," and Wilfred Lucas as "The Lady," is no less than an inspiration. And so it goes on down the list, proving Richard Walton Tully's genius for casting.

Wilfred Buckland, art director, whose achievements heightened the charm of previous Tully productions, and George Beaulieu, gifted cinematographer, who also contributed to their artistic success, were associated with Mr. Tully in the production of "Trilby," which as a First National attraction, will be presented at this theatre.

Thursday, Friday and Saturday, Earl Williams and Alice Calhoun will appear in "Masters of Men."

The Orpheum

"WHERE THE PAVEMENT ENDS," a swiftly moving story of the South Seas, with Alice Terry and Ramon Novarro in the leading roles, is on view today at this theatre and will also be shown on Wednesday.

"Where the Pavement Ends," is different from anything Mr. Ingram has ever done, but it bears that stamp of real genius which characterized "The Four Horsemen," "The Prisoner of Zenda," and "Trifling Women." It is an extraordinary photoplay in every particular, in direction, acting, settings, story and photography. It is a tale of how love came into the life of the daughter of a South Seas mission. What better settings for a tale of romance than the far away islands of the Southern Pacific. Here is romance in its essence. The very atmosphere breeds romance—the clean, white beaches leaping in the brilliant sun, the tall, waving palms against a glowing sunset, the soothing breezes of a moonlit night. And all this strange, exotic atmosphere of luxuriant nature and heart-filling romance is transferred to the screen with amazing reality. Little wonder that Matilda dreamed of love, and little wonder that love came to her in so strange a way. But the path of love for her was not smooth. There was Gregson, the villainous trader, and enemy of the man who loved. He was the richest man on the island and her father wanted her to marry him. And Gregson wanted her. The conflict between the man who symbolized love and the man who represented passion brings the story to a thrilling and satisfying climax.

Thursday, Friday and Saturday "Hearst Asame" will be shown.

The Arcade

Mary Brown and her Tropical Maids Company opened a week's engagement at the Arcade Theatre starting with the matinee Monday. Mary Brown played here last year and through the high standard of her plays from beginning to end endeared herself to the patrons of the Arcade. The opening bill is "A Peck of Trouble." "Doc" Paul, featured comedian, has nothing of the "slap stick" in his comedy but puts his work over in neat production style and Dick Butler, as the character comedian, simply makes you laugh from his entrance to his exit. Then following is Grayce Robertson, the Flora Finch of musical comedy; Jerry Bryce, the dancing fool; Ord Weaver, comedian; Jim Tom Story, known as the saxophone king; whom Mary boasts of as being the cleverest saxophone player on the circuit. Hazel Lyons, the girl at the piano; is more than pleasing to listen to and look at. A chorus of eight pretty and clever dancers is one of the features of the show.

On the screen is shown Holbrook Blinn in "Power," a five-reel feature.

Joseph Greer and His Daughter

HENRY
WEBSTER

Copyright by The Hays-Merrill Co.

"I don't know," she said soberly. "I like this pretty well as it is. I don't believe I could ever want anything very different unless—well, unless I was sure you did. Unless you wanted something different—terribly."

"I don't believe I'll have any trouble convincing you, Joe," he told her. And then, with his familiar consideration, since he saw she was shaken and distressed by doubts, he covered her hands with his, and said she wasn't to worry about it, anyhow. She could have all the time she wanted for making up her mind.

"You're a dear, Henry," she said, with a catch in her voice. "If I ever marry anybody it will be you."

He was well pleased with the beginning he had made, and he looked forward to going up to her flat to lunch with her the following Sunday. In the fearful hope that the matter might be explicitly and finally settled after all, before Margaret got home.

But on Saturday afternoon, within a few minutes of his leaving home from the bank, she knocked him by appearing, in a condition of unexpressed excitement, at his own door.

"I couldn't wait for tomorrow," she said. "I could hardly wait to tell you. I almost spoiled it by telephoning."

Henry, I've heard from Joe—a long letter. He's all right again; just as I've always said he'd be."

It was strange that Henry's heart should have sunk at that, but it did. "Oh, that's wonderful," he said. "Come in and sit down, and tell me about it."

"I don't believe I can sit down," she confessed. But she made him do so, in an easy chair, and light his pipe. Impatiently, she squeezed the tears out of her eyes. "I don't know if I can talk either. You see, he's the old Joe again, as he hasn't been—oh, hardly since you've known him, Henry."

That letter, it was like a boy's letter—a schoolboy's. Some of the things in it, you'd know whether to believe or not. He never cared whether you did believe him or not. Only laughed.

"He told me the way he disappeared from that place, where Doctor Barnett took him. He was walking around the grounds, thinking he would just walk away as he was—he had that money with him, of course—when he heard a couple of men on the other side of a clump of bushes talking Spanish—a sort of Spanish—and he sat down and talked with them. They were part of a gang that was building a road, a concrete road, right by the capitolium. They were being worked awfully hard, trying to finish that stretch before frost."

"One of them didn't like it and said he was going to quit. Joe gave him some money, and promised him some more, to go to the village and buy him some clean clothes and a razor, and things, and bring them back there. And then he showed off his beard, and dressed in the working clothes, and went and got a job with the gang, having everything interpreted for him into Spanish before he would understand it. He was right there through all the excitement over his having disappeared. He must have enjoyed that, though the work pretty near killed him," he said.

"It only lasted three or four weeks before they had to stop on account of the frost. But he got interested in some by that time. Thinking about them. Thinking about getting something that would be better than concrete. So he went down to New Jersey to some of the big chemical plants there, and looked around and asked questions. Joe can get anybody to tell him anything, of course. And then he began to get an idea."

"He has set up a little laboratory of his own—I don't know where he got the money, but he always kept some handy—and he thinks he's on the trail of what he's looking for. Something that will be cheaper than concrete, and just about as easy to lay—when you know how to do it; and as good for houses as it is for motorcars. He's almost ready, he says, to go at it in a big way. If he gets it, it will be about the biggest thing there is. He says his name is going to be spelled with a small letter, some, say, just the same as Macginnick's."

"You don't suppose he has got hold of a thing like that, do you?" Henry asked.

She turned upon him, sharply. When he says he has it he'll have it," she retorted. "It will be all there, from beginning to end—and it'll work. His first process worked, didn't it?"

Henry blinked, and acknowledged that it did. Then he laid down his head and clasped his hands. Jennie had no longer looking at him.

"No, I don't care whether it works or not as long as he does his mind. I sleep in the old way. If that doesn't hurt out right he'll find something else. He says that by fall, he thinks he'll need no more there. He will when we really get going, anyway."

It was then she looked around at Henry, sitting very still in his easy chair, his hands between his knees. He uttered a little cry of dismay, stood up at him for a moment without moving, and then as the tears came and he went over to him without a word and kissed him.

"Oh, I understand," he told her. "You don't feel unhappy about it. I haven't a doubt you're right. And nothing is spoiled that we've got."

"I love you better than I do him," she said, smiling away again. "At least I think I do. I've never dreamed of marrying him, and never would even if he wanted me. But in another way—a sort of office way—I've been married to him all along. And now he's coming back, and wants to again."

Once more he told her in his kind, reassuring voice that it was all right and that he understood, but something in his look filled her with panic, and she said with great emphasis, that she must be running on at once. He made no effort to detain her, but at the door, as he held it open, he asked:

"How about lunch tomorrow? Am I still invited on the old time?"

"Of course," she said, and he shut the door behind her rather quickly.

Twins' Roots and Herbs Banished Grandfather's Kidney Troubles

In the old days when grandfather or grandmother had backache or any symptoms of kidney or bladder trouble, the roots and herbs that hung in the kitchen were brought down and brewed into a medicine that there wasn't much guess-work about.

Many of the herbs and roots used in those days many of us remember. Buchu leaves, for example, and Poke root and Mandrake and Stillage.

Then there was Broom-top and Belladonna leaves and Uva Ursi. Some of the old folks used to favor Couch Grass, Stone root and Hydrangea.

Can you go back that far? If you can you'll remember that not so many years ago, kidney troubles in those days were not at all uncommon.

Would it surprise you to know that in Dr. Carey's Marshroot Prescription 777 that is sold by practically every drugist in America, all those old time herbs and roots are represented?

Yes, and eight or ten others. Perhaps that's why Marshroot Prescription 777 has such a tremendous sale today. Perhaps the old fashioned roots and herbs are best after all.

Dr. Carey always thought so and as he was a specialist in "diseases of the urinary organs" for over 40 years it's reasonable enough to think he ought to know.

If you have backache, or moist palms, or puffing eyelids, or speak Dr. Carey's Marshroot Prescription 777 before the eyes you may have kidney trouble and not know it.

In that case, Marshroot Prescription 777 is what you should ask Connellsville Drug Co., 809, Main for a stitch in time: saves time and roots and herbs are a good medicine anyway.—Advertisement.

Shoes and Hosiery for Milady's Wear

Does Show No Sign of Giving Out, According to Fashionist.

It is the blending of details which make the ensemble, and smart women may spend more time and money creating this intangible air of being "chic" through such a medium than on the very foundation itself. In dress, says a fashion correspondent in the Portland Oregonian, on the other hand, atmosphere may be attained most economically with just a brief study of fashion's "outposts."

The indispensable starting point and one of the first thoughts of milady when it comes to winter attire for any and all occasions, is that of correct shoes and stockings.

There is only one thing that approaches simplicity about a classification of the present modes for the feet—that is, they are for sport or dress. But once within either of the fields we have a mass of strappings. The shoe with the tongue has tilted itself out—so styled Colonial. The idea that one can't be comfortable and in style was recently dispelled on the runway of a silks manufacturer's display. The foot reformer and comforter has found he had to put his best foot forward, too, and could do so with very few exceptions, and these the ultra fancy, which were but short lived with all manufacturers.

Extravagance is the keynote in the dress shoe and, as a fashionist has said, "Does show no sign of giving out." When straps were revived—we dare not say originated out of respect to our ancestors of the early Fourteenth century—it seemed a limited field; in fact, they soon gave way to the aforementioned Colonial. Only for a short time, however, for straps now have an altogether new air.

As to color, there is an unlimited range. Do not mistake me and recall those vivid red, green and blue of last season. Shoes today are neutrals. Black suede or kid is preferred to patent leather and often a combination of the two leathers makes a pleasing complement to the black felt hat. For it is atmosphere we are seeking.

Suede holds its own for the very best of the limitless possibilities in dyeing; also the gorgeous effects produced through contrasting the beige, brown, tan and gray. It takes but the accomplishment of a wire brush to keep their surface unmarred.

For evening wear the possibilities of completing a costume are even greater when it comes to fabrics. For example, satins, brocades, gold kid, metallic cloths, not to mention the thousands of combinations and the extravagant use of cut steel.

Even for sports there seems to be no chance of reverting to the commonplace. If we have a pair of Oxford we must consider the accompanying hose. Silk stockings with sports shoes are not done! They must be foot—wool and silk or linen, in contrasting tone or patterned.

For that matter, hosiery is just as important as any shoe and plays just as much of a part in the costume generally.

Chic Utility Coat of Soft Cinnamon Plaid

This garment, for all-around wear, is of soft cinnamon plaid. It has collar and cuffs of red fox. The hat is of tan felt.

Tapes and Ribbons.
Before washing children's dresses or underwear with ribbon drawn through, the following is a good plan and saves a lot of trouble, as no bodkin is required: Sew or pin to the end of the ribbon a piece of tape of the same length. Pull the ribbon out of the garment, leaving the tape in its place. When the garment is washed the ribbon is replaced the same way.

Chenille Coats.
Swagger coats are now made from chenille—yes, exactly such material as we used to see in draperies! Flowered, too, in that soft blending of colors which only chenille can produce. With the floral fabric a plain one is used, the top being in a plain color, the border coming out floridly and the downy effect forming the high collar.
